What do you see?

Where and when was this photograph taken?

Who are these people? What are they doing?

The Library of Congress—the world's largest library—holds millions of books, maps, photographs, posters, manuscripts, sound recordings and motion pictures that document American history and culture. Many of these items are now available in a digital format on the Library's website—www.loc.gov.

For more information about this photograph, and others like it, please see the "National Child Labor Committee Collection" in the Prints & Photographs Online Catalog.
