Welcome to the literacy program.

We are glad you want to read and write better.

You are not alone.

More than 400,000
Oklahoma adults do not have the reading skills they need.

Oklahoma City learners (left to right)
Dietrica Carolina, Michelle Gentry, Lisa Ngo,
Millie Mustin, and Virginia Cue.

That is
one of every five adults.

At the literacy program, you will work with a tutor.

Your tutor is not paid.

Your tutor wants to help you learn.

Ponca City learner Alicia Aguilar [left] and her tutor, Catherine Horner.

Your tutor will listen to you
read and help you with words.

A tutor
works with one learner
at a time or
with small groups.

Altus
learner
and her tutor, Lynne Collingwood.

This is a good way
to learn.

Tulsa learner Mary McLerran (front right) and Oklahoma City tutors Kay Walls (left) and Ninnah Webb.

The lessons are free.

You will have books to help
you study.

Durant learner Paul Ramirez (right)
with his tutor, Mike Simpson.

You will practice
reading
and writing.

You may work on a computer.

Woodward learner Antonia Handrahan
and Ponca City learner Alicia Aguilar.

You can bring things you want to read.

You can bring things you need to read.

You and your tutor
will decide
when
and where
to meet.

Call your tutor if
you will be late.

Call your tutor if
you can not meet.

Learning to read takes time
and work.

Go to all of your lessons.

Be on time.

Oklahoma City learner Christy Morrison (right) and her tutor Kay Walls.

Study at home.

Read as much as you can.

Learning to read can help you
get a better job,

Oklahoma City
learner Aleecia
James.
